Removing Preconceived Notions ...

The Colors on the GivaGeta Playing Cards Represent Diversity

“... the first things we noticed was that the GivaGeta cards have different colors. The clubs are green, the hearts red, diamonds purple and spades blue. It's great as it is another way of changing what you know, getting rid of our preconceived notions of the way things are supposed to be.

For example, we come into situations and have preconceived notions, of the way they are supposed to be and the colors on the GivaGeta cards are different colors than we are used to, so like the many different people we meet they remind us to give them a chance to get to know them. They help us get rid of our preconceived notions of what someone is like and to give them a chance.

Just because it has always been that way it does not have to be that way. I believe it was songwriter Tom Chapin who said “You have to change to grow”. We use the GivaGeta cards in all three of our sessions.”
